CV's Summary

Clinical academic with main interest in schizophrenia and psychosis. I completed my psychiatry training in Barcelona (Spain) in 2003 and moved to Cambridge in 2007. Since 2011, I lead the chronic schizophrenia team and recently the Cambridge Psychosis Centre.

I was the Associate Clinical Director for the WT/MRC Behavioural and Clinical Neuroscience Institute (BCNI), University of Cambridge (UoC) between 2011 and 2015. I am associated lecturer at the Department of Psychiatry (UoC), Mental Health Speciality lead for the Comprehensive Research Network NIRH-CRN and member of the NIHR-HTA program funding committee for large UK-based clinical trials.

Translating the research into novel clinical care interventions is paramount for me. The epidemiological and experimental research has led to new clinical protocols, from setting the clozapine community initiation to novel CBT interventions for Clozapine-induced OCD, among others. We also have expertise in commercial and non commercial clinical trials and collaborations within UoC, UK centers and abroad.

From the research point of view, my research career covers +100 original manuscripts (h-index~33 and +3,200 citations, different sources). My PhD focused on neuroscience and then moved to the molecular pathways that links schizophrenia with rest of the body, which was a main line of research (inflammation, ageing and metabolism), with over +40 original research papers on this topic, but more recently I focused on exploring factors associated with mental comorbidity in schizophrenia, with particular interest in neuroscience of negative symptoms and comorbid obsessive-compulsive disorder. My research has been funded by NARSAD (Young investigator award), NIH (RO1), NIHR-BRC and NIHR-HTA, among others. I have also received a number of awards for my clinical work (Clinical Excellent Awards), research and PhD, and for the book for general public about schizophrenia (in Spanish, +10,000 copies).
